Release Sought For 2 Hostages

BEIRUT (NYT) - Two West German businessmen who have been held hostage in Lebanon since January are to be freed in the next few days, according to Syrian military sources and Lebanese businessmen with connections to the kidnappers.

The state-controlled Syrian news agency, SANA, quoted an unidentified Syrian Army officer in Lebanon as having said he hoped that Alfred Schmidt and Rudolf Cordes would be freed soon. He said his forces had exerted efforts to secure the release of the two men.

Pérez de Cuéllar Sets Trip to Gulf

UNITED NATIONS, New York — Secretary-General Ja-vier Pérez de Cuéllar said Friday that he had been authorized by the Security Council to visit Iran and Iraq as soon as possible to seek implementation of a July 20 Security Council call for a cease-fire in the Gulf war. He told reporters he would visit Iran first. No dates have yet been set, but the United Nations chief said he expected to begin his mission around the middle or end of next week, returning to New York on Sept. 16 or 17. The secretary-general emerged from consultations and said Iran and Iraq would be ssked to "cease all hostilities during my mission in the area." More Gulf news, Page 5.

class are costly and difficult for the Guil antagonists to acquire. A single Harpoon missile, for instance, costs well over $1 million, and industry experts say the price of an Exocet is probably about $250,000. Moreover, even the battle-tested Exocet — it was the missile used against the American warship Stark in the Gulf in May -- can easily fail to destroy a large tanker, experts say. Naval architects and shipping officials who asked that they not be identified said a typical 1,000-foot (300-meter) tanker was not easy to sink; in some respects, it may be even less vulnerable to attack than easily penetrate such plates, but a missile explosion inside a tanker is muffled by the crude oil that fills cargo compartments, and crude oil is unlikely to catch fire, even when exposed to a warhead explosion.

If a missile should blow a huge hole in a 1,000-foot tanker's hull, the effect, a Coast Guard expert said, would be to flood one of up to 17 cargo compartments. This would merely lower the ship in the water without putting it in danger of sinking.

But although the use of anti-ship missiles in the Gulf has been rare, attacks using small missiles, including infantry anti-tank rockets, have occurred often. Such missiles can cause extensive damage to a merchant ship's bridge or crew quarters, and the weapons are relatively cheap. An American Light Anti-Tank Weapon, or LAW, which is a shoulder-fired missile, costs $348. and a Soviet equivalent, the rocket-propelled grenade, is believed to carry a comparable price tag.

Iran's hit-and-run naval forces are also believed to carry some American missiles with greater ranges and striking power, includ-ing the Dragon and the TOW, both wire-guided missiles designed to penetrate tank armor. (The TOW was sold to Iran during the U.S. effort to bargain for the release of hostages held by Iranian-backed terrorists in Lebanon.) The TOW, with a warhead six inches in diameter, can be fired at targets up to two

"I'd hate to be on a gasoline tanker if a missile hit an empty compartment," one said. Such a compartment, he explained, might contain an explosive mixture of gasoline fumes and air, and even a small missile might set it off. Some gasoline is still being shipped through the Gulf, he said, although most tankers transport crude oil. Under international law, tankers of more than 40,000 tons net displacement are required to flush oxygen from empty crude oil compartments, thereby eliminating the explosion hazard. This is done by sending exhaust gas from diesel engines, rich in fire quenching carbon dioxide, into the empty oil tanks. Tankers carrying liquid petro-leum gas, which is very flammable, must be built with double hulls, in

Envoys Say Crackdown On Catholics Provoked Takeover in Burundi

By Blaine Harden

NAIROBI — Long-simmering resentment over suppression of the Roman Catholic Church in the central African nation of Burundi was the driving force behind the military coup that toppled the country's president, diplomats said Fri-

Colonel Jean-Baptiste Bagaza, who had controlled Burundi for 11 years, was deposed Thursday while he was attending a conference of French-speaking nations in Quebec. He rushed back to Africa on Friday, landing in Nairobi, but with Burundi's international airport and land borders still closed. he could not return home.

[Colonel Bagaza took a flight back to Paris early Saturday after Kenya apparently refused to allow him to remain. Reuters said in a report from Nairobi that cited airport sources. He had been waiting in the VIP lounge at the airport for 12 hours. The sources said Colonel Bagaza was aboard the same Air France plane that brought him from Paris.

Colonel Bagaza, 41, who came to power in a military coup in 1976, refused to speak to reporters in Nairobi.

Colonel Bagaza had led a tribal minority government. Members of his tribe, the Tutsi, dominate the government and the military. The Tutsi however, are outnumbered six to one by members of the majority tribe, the Hutu. Animosity between the two tribes is heightened by the legacy of tribal geno-cide in 1972, when Tutsis massacred about 100,000 Hutu.

By Robert J. McCartney

BONN - The West German government is seeking to dampen expectations for the scheduled visit here next week by the East German leader, Erich Honecker, Officials predict that the trip's symbolic value will outweigh the importance of any agreements to be reached.

A joint communique to be signed Tuesday will probably announce that Chancellor Helmut Kohl will pay a return visit to East Germany at a date yet to be decided, the chancellery Minister, Wolfgang Schäuble, said at a news conference

But Mr. Schäuble said be did not think the five-day trip, Mr. Hon-ecker's first to West Germany, in East Germany, Mr. Schäuble

A Western diplomat familiar with East Germany suggested that Mr. Honecker might be saving a surprise for the trip. "I can't imagine that he would arrive with something dramatic, some gift for Bonn, if only to grab headlines, the diplomat said.

Mr. Schäuble said Mr. Honecker would view the trip as a success in his campaign to assert East Germany's legitimacy as a nation and the Communist Party's right to rule there. Bonn officially does not recognize East Germany as an independent country.

"Politically and psychologically, this is an important event," Mr. Schäuble said.

But Mr. Schäuble said that "from a legal aspect, nothing new will take place with this visit" regarding East Germany's status. At Bonn's insistence, the trip is de-scribed only as a "working visit." because welcoming Mr. Honecker on a "state visit" would constitute full recognition of East Germany.

Mr. Honecker will meet with Chancellor Kohl and other top West German officials on Monday and Tuesday during the official portion of his visit, according to a program made public this week.

Libya Triumph in Chad Ends Doubts on Gadhafi

U.S. Officials Say Surprise Victory Shows Colonel Still Has Ambitions

By Neil A. Lewis New York Times Service
WASHINGTON — An unexpected Libyan military victory in Chad has dashed hopes that Colonel Moammar Gadhafi had given up his territorial ambitions there, according to American officials and military analysts. They said the recapture of the town of Aozou near the border of the two countries would provide Libya with a base for attacks against northern Chad, but said they did not believe the Libyan victory imperiled the Chadian gov-erument of Hissène Habré. [A Chadian official said Libya bombed two towns in northern Chad on Friday and was preparing an offensive against positions south of the disputed border region. Reuters reported from Paris.

["A Libyan offensive is imminent both from Sudan and from the north." Kassire Coumakoye Delwa, Minister of Public Works, said during a visit to Paris. He said Libyan planes attacked the towns of Gouro and Onianga Kebir on Friday morning.]

The American officials attributed Libya's victory in the battle a week ago to impressive military tactics they had not seen before and a lack of support for the Chadian forces from the French.

France has been the principal supporter of the Chadian govern-ment in its efforts to resist Colonel Gadhafi, providing more than $70 million in aid since January. But the French have long been wary of Mr. Habre's interest in chasing the Libyans from the Aozou Strip, a disputed area along the border between the two countries.

Mr. Habre has tried in the last few weeks to expel the Libyans from the Aozou Strip to complete a military offensive against Colonel Gadhafi's forces that began in January. Chadian forces seized the town of Aozou on Aug. 8, routing 1,000 Libyan soldiers and killing 650, and seemed poised to chase the Libyans across the border.

But the French regard the fight-ing in Aozou as a border dispute. Libya claimed sovereignty over the region, believed to be rich in uranium, annexing it in 1973.

France, the former colonial power in Chad, supports Chad's claim to the 100-mile-wide Aozou strip. But French officials say the border dispute around Aozou, to which Libya laid claim under the terms of a 1943 treaty, should be settled through arbitration.

Military analysts say they now expect the Chadians to counterattack when their supplies are

The situation now, officials say, is that Libya has a sound staging area for raids on Chadian bases in the north of the country. Indeed, the Chadians reported that Libya resumed bombing of three towns on Wednesday, including Wadi Dum, the site of a major air base. Officials were unanimous in the conviction that the Chadian soldiers, expert in fighting in the harsh terrain of the Tibesti Mountains, would successfully resist the Gadhafi forces.

"But Habré will be forced to stay in a defensive position throughout the region," said an administration official, describing that as a costly situation for Chad.

The United States has supplied large numbers of Redeye anti-air-craft missiles to the Habré forces, which analysts said were used to down four Libyan aircraft in the unsuccessful defense of the town of forces displayed a professionalism on the battlefield in taking the town of Aozou that they had not seen before. Libyan bombers, flying at high altitudes to avoid missiles, pounded the town for days before the final assault, officials said. The ground troops moved in swiftly in light trucks, after fortifications around the town began to fold.

The use of the light vehicles was the very tactic employed by the Chadians in defeating the Libyan Army.

Colonel Gadhafi's military victory came in time for the 10th anniversary of the revolution in which he took power. Analysis noted that he was quick to bring in Western reporters by plane on the weekend to visit the town of Aczou.

The army plans to install a $43 part on the $1.5 million Bradley Fighting Vehicle that should keep the amphibious troop carrier from sinking when it goes into the water, according to a House Armed Services subcommittee investigating 11 Bradley sinkings or swampings in the past seven years. The problem turned out to be a canvas barrier that pops up to keep water out when the vehicle crosses a river or stream. The barrier collapsed too readily, so a $43 locking mechanism is being installed to hold the barrier more firmly in place.

The World Shaking Book for Mankind "In the Light of Truth"

The Grail Message by Abd-ru-ship

In these crucial times the help of the Creator flows with a power and abundance beyond description. Drawing from the Pure Source of Eternal Truth, Abd-ru-shin has brought the World the Saving Revelation. Among all books of spiritual content this Work takes the supreme place, and provides the answer to all our questions, problems and fears. From the same Origin as the true Message of Christ, this Revelation will rush over the Earth like a powerfully purifying and at the same time invigorating stream. Its all-embracing vastness, its sheer vitality and fullness, make any attempt to classify it unavailing. Words cannot express what is accessible to the intuitive perception alone. One may only approach this Message in humility and thankfulness for such

The Author writes: "I wish to fill the gaps which have so far always remained unanswered in the souls of men, and which never leave any serious thinker in peace, if he honestly seeks the Truth."

A Late Spring in Japan

Japan's azaleas blossomed late this year and are straggling. In the early months, gross national product and industrial production were stagnant or falling, and unemployment rose. Domestic demand picked up, but not enough to offset weaker net exports. This is not a good mixture for a country that is supposed to be playing a major role in the adjustment of the world's payments imbalances - the huge contrasts between the West German and Japanese surpluses and the American deficit, along with the inability of Third World debtors to find expanding markets for their exports. Last Saturday in this newspaper we criticized West Germany for inaction. Most commentators prefer to pick on Japan. Is this justified?

There are signs of a belated spring. Since May, unemployment has been falling in Japan and output has risen. The foreign surplus, though still an enormous $7 billion to $8 billion a month, may be turning around. The physical volume of exports is falling with imports rising, though the automatic effects of the stronger yen have been attenuated as Japanese exporters carve into their fat profit margins and act to improve efficiency. If a new oil crisis does not push the yen down and the dollar up again, revaluation will shrink export profits enough to deter Japanese exporters. There are already signs of this as more operations are being moved to countries where production costs are cheaper. This benefits the rest of the world: Brand names remain Japanese, but the labor producing them does not. The result is an easing of strains over balance of payments. But exchange rates can do only part of

of creditor and debtor are crucial. Yet the signs that Japan is increasing its spending faster than the United States remain hazy.

Unlike West Germany, Japan has not resolutely refused to stimulate demand. In May it promised a 6 trillion yen ($42.6 billion) boost from the budget, equivalent to a sizable 1.5 percent of GNP. About a quarter of this will come from personal tax cuts and a third from greater spending by the central government. The rest, hopefully, will come from the response of the private construction industry to financial guarantees and subsidies, and enhanced local government spending.

But the haze persists. The tax cut seems likely to be offset by an equivalent cut in the tax privileges accorded to private savers. No one can guess what this will produce - a much hoped-for drop in total savings? The same high savings with less tax relief, which would be deflationary? Or some mixture in between? Higher government spending may be slow to take effect, and the reactions of local governments and private builders to the more indirect incentives are uncertain. Much of the expansionary effect could be negated by an even faster rise in land prices.

Japan has far to go before its appropriate role as a catalyst is assured. It is taking the first steps, but forecasts of recovery trade on fine margins. Japan's need today is to interpret its vague promises constructively, not to negate them by delay or new deflationary measures next year. Skepticism about Tokyo's policy remains in order - not to beat on Japan, but to boost it. INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE

Bee Dung, Nothing More

As every reader of Washington memoirs knows, government has two castes: bureaucrats who endlessly churn out red tape, and political appointees who daringly cut through it. The case of yellow rain, set out in the fall issue of Foreign Policy, demolishes this myth. It proves how embarrassingly astray political appointees can go when they ignore routine procedure.

In 1981, Alexander Haig, then secretary of state, announced that the United States had physical evidence of chemical warfare in Southeast Asia. Based on interviews with refugees, and the finding of toxin in a single sample of yellow rain, the State Department accused the Soviet Union of helping allies in Southeast Asia conduct chemical warfare, in violation of solemn treaties.

At first, only one voice was raised in question. By persistent inquiry, Matthew Meselson, a Harvard biologist, developed another explanation: Yellow rain is the excrement of jungle bees. It is yellow from digested polien grains, and it rains down from swarms of bees too high to be seen. His theory turns out to be exactly right. The government's own studies, still unpublished. prove that the source is bees, not bombs.

crous a position? From documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act, Mr. Meselson and his colleagues Julian Robinson and Jeanne Guillemin began to focus on Richard Burt, then a senior State Department official. Before the first detection of toxin could be confirmed, and against the advice of lower-ranking officials, he pressed to release the information, writing to General Haig of "our strategy for securing the maximum impact from this issue."

For the sake of a quick propaganda victory, these two men rushed onto public record with an extreme accusation. As the bureaucracy methodically went through the checks that should have been done in the first place, that position became preposterous. The army's Chemical Systems Laboratory spent a whole year learning how to neasure accurately the toxins that a contract laboratory claimed to have detected. It found no toxin in 80 samples. Defense laboratories in Britain, France and Sweden. find no toxin in any sample.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Embassy in Thailand, to improve on the quality of testimony about yellow rain by Hmong refugees, repeatedly asked for more professional interviewers. They arrived in 1983 and spent two years questioning witnesses, including those who had given the most striking earlier testimony of chemical attack. These witnesses explained they were only repeating hearsay.

Part of the administration case for yellow rain rested on secret intelligence intercepts that confirmed the dates of attack alleged by the refugees. But on re-interview, the refugoes could not agree on dates because the Hmong measure time by seasons, not days.

esco is so sovernment still cannot bear to admit to it. Both State and the White House still say they have no reason to question that yellow rain is a chemical warfare agent. Mr. Burt, now the ambassador in Bonn, explains he wanted the story out quickly "to stop the killing." But the bees were not killing anyone.

The credible account comes from the meticulous studies conducted by the bureaucracy. Yellow rain is bee dung.

Yes to National Testing

test began to be given to American schoolchildren. Called the National Assessment of Educational Progress, it differed from other tests not so much in what it sought to measure as in how it expressed the results. Instead of the usual percentiles that describe how groups compare, the assessment set out to describe what they actually knew. How many could answer this civics question, how many solve that problem in math, bow many write a grammatical letter?

That seemingly innocent idea ran into fierce resistance. State school officials especially said it could lead to a national curricnlum in violation of the tradition of local control. Their critics said that what they really feared was exposure and accountability, but to a considerable extent the superintendents prevailed. The tests were authorized, but the testing organization was permitted to report the results only in regional terms, blurring their usefulness Now there is a move to sharpen the reporting. The number of children tested would be increased to create valid samples in, and allow results to be reported for, each state. The list of subjects tested would be enlarged. The proposal, which has gained broad back-ing in Washington, reflects nationwide interest in performance standards for the schools. State school officials are no longer resisting. The expansion will likely be written into the Senate version of the bill reauthorizing the main federal education programs.

It is a good idea. Yes, if it works as intended it will increase the pressure on a lot of schools. But what harm does that do? The testing program so far has not so much imposed a national curriculum as reflected the one that implicitly exists. Most school systems have similar goals. The idea here is to measure better how they live up to them. -THE WASHINGTON POST.

Peace Mission to Tehran Having procrastinated for weeks over whether to accept the UN Security Council's call for a cease-fire, Iran has now invited [UN Secretary-General] Javier Pérez de Cuéllar for talks in Tehran. Lines should be kept open to the Iranians because, isolated and driven into a corner, they could be as dangerous as a wounded beast at bay. It is therefore right that Mr. Pérez de Cuéllar should go to Tehran as a neutral emissary. Iran is not monolithic and his visit could serve to strengthen the hand of the moderates in the country. - The Daily Telegraph (London).

The suspicion remains that elements within the [Reagan] administration are hankering after an excuse to teach Iran a lesson. To that end Iraq has to be presented as the innocent party. It is not only Iran which must decide whether it wants the secretarygeneral's mission to succeed or fail. Washington faces a similar choice.

The Eastern Thaw Won't Wash NATO Away

P ARIS — Mikhail Gorbachev's program and its potential meaning for the West have released the damper on geopolitical speculation.

These new bursts of analytical effort are all to the good. They make people who are concerned about policy stop and think, and examine assumptions. A lot of it is far out, based on dubious generalities such as a surge of the Germans to reunification and lism, anti-Americanism in Western Europe deriving from overdependence on the United States, a triumph of American isolationism. There is a little something in all of this, but not every wisp of cloud on the horizon is a gathering storm. The speculation is excessively alarmist and leads to dangerous recommendations: to phase out the North Atlantic Treaty Organization soon because it is about to collapse, to let the West Germans go nuclear and fend for themselves. In part, this frenetic reasoning stems from false supposition that the Reagan administration's anti-Communist crusade has become an American constant. Not even the Reagan White House has been constant about it, however, continuing to improve relations with China and preparing new arms control treaties with Moscow even as old ones are undermined. The next administration is likely to spit less fire.

In part, the reasoning projects Mikhail Gorba-chev's impact and intentions too far ahead. There are still too many unknowns to draw conclusions about Soviet foreign policy and its effect on the world America will face. By Flora Lewis

What can be seen are the fundamental changes in succeeding generations since World War II, and the direction they set for the future. They do suggest an ultimate chance for undoing the partition of Europe and replacing the Cold War with a Europe-wide security system.

In the first postwar generation, containment worked, and with recovery the Soviet threat to Western Europe receded. There is no longer any political, economic or social threat to the West from the East. What remains is military.

In the second generation, Eastern Europe began to review and regain consciousness of national and to review and regain consciousness of national and European identity. Soviet domination remains, but over an increasingly diverse group of distinct states. Moscow's efforts to homogenize and Russi-fy its new European empire have failed completely. In less than a decade of detente, East and West Europeans breached many barriers to human and cultural contact imposed by the Iron Curtain.

Now the third postwar generation is under way, and it too is bringing important developments in Eastern Europe. Where there are reform-minded regimes, whether pushed from below as in Poland or decreed from above as in Hungary, they are receiving Moscow's support instead of its condemnation.

Where leaders oppose reform, they are tolerated in a way Moscow never before offered challengers to its line. Mr. Gorbachev cannot afford upheaval in the bloc; it would bring him down. Ironically, cling-ing to the old Soviet line as Moscow now changes brings new autonomy to the Eastern states. Each Honecker of East Germany is a clear case.

This could lead to a fourth stage as a modernizing Soviet Union seeks a more stable base than force for relations with its diversifying allies. The Finnish statesman Max Jacobson has glimpsed possibilities in what he calls the "turning point in Finland." He notes that Soviet leaders now speak of Finland as "a good neighbor" and mean it. "Do they have a better one?" he asks tartly. The Finns are confident now that Moscow respects their independence as they respect Soviet security needs.

Mr. Jacobson argues that what he calls "the success of Soviet foreign policy" with Finland could gradually become a model for its constipated relations with Eastern Europe.

The "Europeanization of Europe," which means overcoming artificial partition, must pass through the East to come peacefully. NATO is essential as a stabilizer, above all for Germany but in fact for both halves of Europe, until this process is complete. Even the Soviets now say their call for "dissolving blocs" is "a political slogan, not current politics. Only when all these stages have been passed can the ending of alliances be contemplated. It may or may not take another three generations, but the stages cannot be skipped without great peril. The last one will not be the last in history either, but it will be a different world.

Gulf: A Case For Bringing Iran Down

By William Pfaff

PARIS — There is a serious case to be made for a U.S. intervention in the Gulf war to produce Iran's defeat. This case has not been examined. Yet the drift of American action in the Gulf is toward such an intervention

It is curious that the case for war is not stated even by those who appear to be for it. If the U.S. government is at fault, so are its critics. A Washington Post editorial (IHT, Sept. 3) objected to the Reagan administration's failure to say what it will do if Iran attacks U.S. ships in the Gulf, but added that the president was right to send ships there, that the Ayatoliah Khomeini must be prevented from "dominating" the Gulf, and that the U.S. Navy cannot now be withdrawn. The editorial concluded that "the war has to be brought to an end." But how? Iran is in the more powerful military position, and it refuses to yield. Its revolution draws its vitality from the war. Only Iran's defeat or collapse will keep it from dominating the Gulf.

Why go to war against Iran? One reason would be to block Iran's domination of the Gulf and lessen its influence on oil prices. But there is a larger and sounder reason.

The Iranian revolution is a cultural and social phenomenon of considin the Islamic world today, its consequences could prove as influential in that region as were those of the religious reforms and upheavals of the 16th century in the Western world. There are limits. How long can the movement keep its dynamism?

How long can it continue to mobilize the young and idealistic? But to the extent that revolutions are spread by conquest, military limits can be imposed. The effects of the French Revolution were great, but the revolutionary and Napoleonic armies were eventually defeated.

If people in Washington or in other capitals are serious about con-taining the Iranian revolution, there is a case for them to join Iraq in the war against Iran. It is a war that Iraq started precisely because its leaders feared Iran's revolution.

Yet if you were to propose to sponds to so many of the forces of that America declare war on Iran, lives at risk. Washington is bluffing, frustration and victimization at work seize its oil exports and assets, and its bluff could well be called.

blockade Iran and prevent arms resupply, attack Iran's war-making capacity, and eventually see to that country's occupation by its enemies, they would, I imagine, be completely horrified.

They would be right to be horrified. There is a case for fighting Iran, but the case for the United States (at least) not to fight Iran is far stronger. Such a war would risk disaster. Moreover, it is evident that Congress would not today vote for such a war and the American public would not consent to it. What, then, is the United States really doing in the Gulf? It is intervening in another people's war— but inconclusively intervening. It is playing at war without facing the consequences. It is allowing itself to be manipulated by Kuwait and Iraq. It is risking American lives without still another wrenching domestic political controversy. The Reagan administration's present line of action almost surely will produce a crisis in which a Democratic Congress will again rebel against actions that lack a defined and attainable objective, and for which its consent has neither been sought nor obtained. It is all much too familiar. People

It was that the United States should not go to war without knowing what it wants, and without the government's having consulted public and the Congress to obtain a substantial consent to both goals and means. The Colonels Had Democracy in Their Gun Sights

By Amando Doronila

MANILA — The failed "colonels' coup" against the government of President Corazon Aquino has plunged the Philippines into a crisis over the role of the military in politics. How Mrs. Aquino handles the affair may well determine whether her administration collapses, bringing down with it the whole edifice of constitutional democracy she has restored since Ferdinand Marcos was forced from power in February 1986. Although military forces loyal to the government thwarted the Aug. 28 coup attempt, which was led by Colonel Gregorio Honasan, further military plots cannot be ruled out. There had been four previous military conspiracies against the Aquino adminis. tration, but this was the most serious challenge, and the bloodiest.

The civil government and loyalist forces hit back hard at the rebels. But the episode showed that Mrs. Aquino's attempts to bring a demo-cratic political system back to the middle-rank officers, mainly from the Talk turns to his colleague's inter-

Philippines is built on shaky foundations. The coup revealed widespread unrest within the armed forces and exacerbated tensions between men in uniform and the civil government. Some of these tensions arose from efforts by the Aquino administration to reform the military, which became enmeshed in politics during the long rule of President Marcos. The rebel attacks on the presidential palace, where Mrs. Aquino was sleeping, and on the armed forces general headquarters did not aim solely to seize the centers of power. They were a frontal assault on the concept of constitutional authority by impatient young military officers who find little use for democratic processes as agents of change in a developing nation. The notion of civil supremacy was under challenge.

Disturbingly, the rebels — led by Philippine Military Academy, the na-tion's premier officer training school — were inspired by a dangerous, anti-democratic ideology. This ideology maintains that the armed forces have a right to intervene in politics and seize power if, in their view, liberal democracy has failed the nation. Support for this notion appears to be widespread within the officer corps. In a manifesto, organizers of the coup attempt said that they had acted to "save the nation" from corruption and political excesses. They also denounced what they called the "soft" approach of the Aquino government in dealing with Communist insurgents. What is worrying is that since the coup, the Communist-led New People's Army has stepped up attacks on military forces in the countryside. Some leaders of Mosippines have said that they are ready rebels in the military to enforce their demand for autonomy in regions they claim as Moslem. The fragmentation of central authority has impaired the capacity of the Aquino administration to enforce public order and combat insurgency. The political center in the Philippines, made up of moderates who gave overwhelming support to the government in a constitutional referendum and congressional elections earlier this year, is now under siege from extremists of the left and the right, who use violence to achieve their ends. There is serious doubt that the government can protect the center against the assault on a constitutional democratic order.

The writer is editor-in-chief of the Manila Chronicle newspaper and a leading political analyst in the Philippines. He contributed this comment to the International Herald Tribune.

WE are flattered, Comrade General Secretary, that you have asked your economic advisory group for an explanation of the Soviet economy's performance during the first x months of 1987. As you already know, our private estimates show that we face a mixed set of opportunities and challenges. We are, alas, where we expected on what the capitalists call GNP. The rate of growth is down to 2.4 percent from 4.2 in 1986. With 3 percent inflation taken for granted but not admitted publicly, this means a flat or negative growth rate this year. Moreover, this suggests industrial production will decline for the next two to three years, as your program of buying quality control by paying productive workers and penalizing laggards takes hold. Our inspectors actually rejecting shoddy goods and managers are cutting pay at inef-ficient factories as they go onto a nominal profit-loss basis.

The 4 percent increase in agriculture is encouraging, if highly tenta-tive, while the 4 percent drop in export revenues is just as disappointing. We already have had to cut back sharply on imports from the capitalists and the Third World, further slowing our production.

Western pundits doubtless will stress the negative side of these statistics, which we have shared with a lew European diplomats. These analysis will start predicting again that if you cannot show that your reforms are "succeeding" within two or three years, then Yegor Ligachev and the Old Liners will be able to play on public discontent and oust you.

Let the wishful ones think what they will. For in mistaking the scope of what you, Mikhail Gorbachev, are trying to accomplish, they exaggerate the strength and force of the opposition you face. That makes it easier for you to ask for understanding and perhaps even concessions from the Americans and Europeans.

These wishful thinkers have not understood how your efforts to "democratize" the party also maximize your power, by legitimizing the peo-ple you put in and sweeping the Old Liners out. That process, we estimate, will be irreversible within a year. You can afford these statistics.

But more fundamental is the failure by these wishful ones outside to see how truly Leninist your economic program is. They do not pay attention to your commitment to change only the way work is organized and in Department of Transport to rewarded, without sacrificing party

After all, the Chinese have made their goal the doubling of per capita income at the turn of the century. That stress on the individual is alarmingly anti-socialist. Your goal of doubling national production by the year 2000 is the correct one. We change not to create rich people, but to boost GNP.
Unlike the Chinese, we members of your economic team are committed to never allowing a parallel system of work where one person can "hire" and exploit others. And under Soviet law, we cannot allow a single person to be unemployed, no matter ow unprofitable the factory.

Our next major reform, the pricing of goods and services, is another example of the totally different way we operate from our ex-comrades in Beijing. They muddled into wild inflationary swings, whereas we will be systematic and maintain control. We will not start down a road that could lead to a mixed economy, as they did. The pricing system must be changed, of course. This monstrosity

London Through Foreign Eyes

TONDON - "The Image of London" as seen by foreigners is one of those exhibitions that make one wonder why they were not done before.

The show, at the Barbican through Oct. 18, is small, but it has a perfect mix: history from an unusual angle, the human element, pictures and drawings unknown to all but archivists — even a handful of very beautiful works of art. There is only one thing slightly wrong: The title can be misleading. The lure of the show lies not in "the image," but in the succeeding images that differed vastly through the ages. The earliest of them, of a place now gone forever, are like an invitation to travel through a city revisited in a dream.

The very first graphic work relating to London from the hand of a traveler is a set of 14 sheets of paper which when fitted together, pro-vide a so-called "long view" of the metropolis from Westminster to metropolis from Westminster to built structures five or six stories Greenwich. Anthonis van den high. London is seen from the direct observation. His panoramic bird's-eye view from the south side of the river is heavily annotated. The long view genre became so for the next hundred years. It certainly inspired the 85-inch

(216-centimeter) etching by the Dutch engraver Claes Jansz Visscher published in 1616 in Amsterdam, which was the great center of topographical documents in the 17th century. This, however, is no mere map, but a real view of a city. Countless church spires and turrets spring up out of clusters of densely er clumsy hand. Apparently oper-ating from Antwerp, he traveled all water. It has a stern medieval feel over England — a whole group of his drawings of royal palaces sur-"Saint Paules Church" — a powervives — and clearly worked from ful square Norman tower rising in the midst of later, largely 15th-century, Gothic additions. So impressive was the early Saint

Paul's Cathedral that Rembrandt made two sketches in pen and sepia wash, one a first thought quickly jotted down, the other more elaborate. These are the only indications that Rembrandt may ever have come to England. Such a visit is questioned by some, but the two successive versions of the same view leave no doubt regarding the painter's interest in Saint Paul's.

The most wonderful feature of early London, however, would seem to have been the bridge depicted by Visscher. Its low round arches with triangular piers breaking the water must have been remarkably well built. They were strong enough to carry four blocks of tall houses topping the bridge from end to end. It must have been an extraordinary walk for a wayfarer, who first went through a postern on the south side followed by the vaulted passages that took him through the blocks. From a distance, it looked like some beautiful if eerie architectural apparition in London. De Jongh, or perhaps his patrons, must have loved the bridge, for he painted it in oils in 1632-33 and again in 1650, when he produced two almost identical views of it. One of the two, drawn out of its private collection for the first time, is a gem of Dutch painting. Its unusual style is character-ized by a remarkable sense of balance and a feel for light in the delicate Italianate tradition of northern Europe.

Sixteen years later, the surround-ings of the bridge, albeit not the bridge itself, were erased by the Great London Fire of 1666, which flattened a metropolis of 100,000 dwellers. Two pictures that are not very good paintings but have a gripping evocative quality give some idea of the Doomsday vision that those fleeing the furnace left In one, surreal-looking stone ru-ing at threatening angles, rickety arches spanning halfway across to some vanished pillar - rise against a blazing background under a huge cloud of black smoke and soot. At left, lonely figures wind their way through a postern of beautiful proportions. Other pictures by Canaletto, done with uninspired meticulous care - for which we must be grateful — preserve for us the memory of the buildings lining the river from Lambeth to Greenwich that were demolished many decades ago. The Italianate era in turn gave way to the 19th-century image, harsh on the eye as the city was harsh to its people. Misery and poverty were so striking that they became a theme graphically chroni-cled by the foreign engravers — Géricault, among others - as it was by Dickens in prose.

Americans, as the symbol of the modern age. It was the heart of the most powerful empire in the world not unlike the New York of today. As a source of artistic inspiration the new London did not amount to much until the advent of Impressionism. To these we owe some of the most beautiful works in the show. They wrapped it up in gray fogs, purple hazes and golden mists. Monet's virtually unknown picture of 1903 from the Denver Art Museum is, as its title aptly says, a study of "A Light Effect on the Thames."

A small group of pictures by André Derain, who came to London at the height of his great period, the Fauve years, provides an admirable conclusion to the show. "The Thames and Tower Bridge" is a complete surprise sent by the little known Fridart Foundation. This is a masterpiece in color effects with red and black trawlers on a green and orange river. The purple ontline of the bridge appears in the distance. It is almost all about Derain's inner vision and hardly conveys an identifiable view of London. At that period, this was all to Except for Anjelica Huston, the director's daughter, as wistfully brooding wife, the cast is composed of Irish players. Outstanding are Donal McCann as the surly husband, Helene Carroll and Cathleen Delany as the hostesses, Donald Donnelly as the comic drunk, Marie Kean as his reproving mother. "The Fed's discount rate hike was a good move, not unexpected, and done because we need to protect the dollar," said Alan Ackerman, senior vice president at Gruntal & Co. Traders said stocks moved generally in line with bonds and stock index futures after the Fed announced that it had boosted its key discount rate, charged on loans to banking institutions, to 6 percent from 5.5 percent.

Stocks initially rose, as did the dollar, on news of the discount rate increase. But soon the dollar retreated and stock prices followed. Traders said the dollar slipped on the view that the half-point discount rate increase was not aggressive enough.

Trading slowed in the afternoon as market participants left for the three-day Labor Day holiday weekend but, in the session's last hour.

Fed Seeks Route to Check Inflation, Defend the Dollar

By LEONARD SILK New York Times Service

EW YORK - Climbing interest rates, triggered by the declining dollar and worries about mounting inflation, have soured the mood on Wall Street, Some analysts have even started to write obimaries for the big bull market of the past five years. "I don't think this is temporary," said Sung Wohn Sohn, chief economist at Norwest Corp., the Minneapolis-based bank holding company. "I certainly think we're in a bear market."

Needing to defend the dollar and check inflation while keeping the expansion going, the Federal Reserve, under its new chair-man, Alan Greenspan, is up against a tricky problem: If it does too little to tighten money and credit, it could fan inflationary expectations; but if it does too much, sending interest rates up sharply, it could put the securities markets and the economy into a nose dive. On Friday, the Fed tightened credit a notch, increasing the discount rate one-half point to Worries about a foreign pullback from dollar investments have intensified.

A steep drop in the U.S. securities markets and a fall in the aconomy, hurting the outlook for corporate profits, could cause foreign investors to cut their holdings of American equities, bonds and other assets. Not only would this be bad news for the markets but also it would mean a severe insufficiency in the savings needed to finance the federal budget deficit and the trade deficit. This would mean another downward shove in the value of the dollar and another upward twist in interest rates.

It will do no good to try to minimize the danger of the growing U.S. dependency on foreign capital. Earlier this year, before he became Fed chairman, Mr. Greenspan warned his clients of the danger of a slackening of foreign investment in U.S. assets, which appeared to be taking place in the first quarter. But the foreign capital inflow picked up again in the second quarter, boistering the stock market, even as the Fed has gradually tightened money, ITH THE dollar weakening after the poor trade figures for the second quarter were announced, worries about a foreign pullback from dollar investments have intensified. In a recent analysis, David Hale, chief economist of Kemper Financial Services in Chicago, warned that concerns about renewed dollar depreciation, if they cause foreign investors to cut newed dollar depreciation, it they cause foreign investors to cent their holdings, could have "a very adverse effect on share prices" because foreign capital has played a major role in pushing up the price-carnings ratios of American stocks in the face of rising bond yields this year.

Foreign investors, according to Mr. Hale, have been expected to purchase more than $40 billion in American equities this year, compared with $18 billion last year and only $3 billion to $4 billion a year during the early 1980s. He puts the current U.S. price-earnings ratio at 17, which appears expensive in relation to Treasury bond yields of more than 9 percent, but he maintains that this is not expensive compared with Japan's P/E ratios of 60 and bond yields of 5 percent. "But not even the Japanese will be able to sustain U.S. equity multiples at high levels if inflation expectations rise sharply and U.S. bond yields rise into double-digit territory," Mr. Hale said. The anxieties about inflation and the dollar seem bound to dominate Fed policy now. Tightening of money runs the risk of slowing the economy, but the risks of failing to defend the dollar and head off inflation would probably be much bigger. In driving foreign capital out of the country, the upward wrench to interest

Bond Bids For U.S. Brewer

Australian Offers To Buy Heileman

SYDNEY — Alan Bond, the Australian businessman, made a $1.2-billion bid Friday for G. Heileman Brewing Co. of Wisconsin, the world's sixth-largest brewer.

Bond Corp. Holdings Ltd. offered $38 a share for all of Heileman's shares through a subsidiary, Amber Acquisition Corp. Heileman's share price rose $8.375 to $42.25 in New York trading Friday. It was the most active issue on the New York Stock Ex-

Bond Corp. absorbed Pittsburgh Brewing Co. in 1986 and Austra-lia's Swan and Fourex brands. Heileman is the fourth-larges brewer in the United States and sixth in the world in terms of the amount of beer sold. It produces the Lone Star, Colt. .45 and Rainier brands. In a letter to Heileman's chairman, Russel Cleary, Mr. Bond asked Heileman's management to join in creating a partnership with Bond that would be a major brewing force worldwide.

Together Bond Brewing and Heileman would be the fourth-largest brewer in the world, enabling i to exploit markets beyond either of our own reaches," the letter said. Bond Corp. last month reported a 117.72 million Australian dollar

($85 million) annual profit on sales of almost $1.8 billion, with brewing making the largest contribution. Bond Corp. said in a statement that the offer by Amber would expire at midnight New York time on Friday, Oct. 2, unless extended. The company said the money for the offer would come from its own funds, a bank facility of up to $700 million and up to $450 million to be provided by Salomon Brothers

Holding Co. Inc. It said the offer was conditional upon 75 percent acceptances and the redemption or invalidation of the company's preferred stock purchase rights.

The statement said the proposes acquisition of Heileman continued the global expansion into brewing of Bond Corp., whose interests also include television and oil.

In its first reaction, Heileman asked its stockholders not to agree to the Bond bid and said it would respond to the offer by Sept. 18

Molten steel being poured at a Nucor plant.

A Mini-Mill Tweaks U.S. Steel Giants

Nucor Pursues Low-Cost Plan to Make Top-Notch Sheet

By Jonathan P. Hicks

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Although Nucor Corp.'s $225 million mill in central Indiana is not due to open for two years, the U.S. steel industry is scrambling to assess the odds that the high-risk experiment

The balance of power in the industry has always been distinct: The big companies that make steel from scratch manufacture the high-quality, flat-rolled products used in automobiles and appliances. The smaller, so-called mini-mill companies, which make steel largely from scrap metal, produce the lower-grade products, such as bars and bolts used in construction.

bolts used in construction.

Nucor, the largest U.S. mini-mill company, is increasingly viewed as threatening that belance with its new $225 million mill. The company, based in Charlotte, North Carolina, plans to use technology that it hopes will enable the mill to make high-quality, flat-rolled steel at a lower cost than anyone else. If Nucor succeeds, it will fundamentally alter the economics of producing steel. The large, financially troubled steelmakers view the new process as a potentially crippling threat to their exclusive hold on the flat-rolled market, the largest and most profitable sector of the industry.

And the mini-mill companies, which have seen the demand for many of their traditional products stagnate, hope to follow Nucor's lead if its new mill succeeds. The project also could spur entrepreneurs in this country to form new ventures, possibly with foreign steelmakers.

The technology that will be employed at the Nucor mill in Crawfordsville, Indiana, is already heing hailed as a breakthrough. The plant's main feature will be an advanced caster developed by SMS Schloemann-Siemag AG of West Germany that is designed to pour molten steel into much thinner slabs than current casters can produce. Its slabs will be two inches (5.1 centimeters) thick, compared with 10 inches for conventional casters.

The slabs are used to make steel sheets one-tenth of an inch thick. Because Nucor's slabs will theoretically be so much thinner than those of other companies, the sheets can be produced from the slabs with much less energy, manpower and wasted material.

Indeed, Nucor believes that five workers will be able to do what it now takes more than 30 workers to do at most other steel companies. The mill, whose work force will be nonunion like those at Nucor's four existing plants, thus could have the lowest-cost flat-rolled operation in the United Nucor hopes to be able eventually to make high-quality hot-band sheets, the industry mainstay, for about $280 a ton. That is significantly less than the approximately $350 a ton that analysts say it costs big companies, such as USX Corp. and Bethlehem Steel Corp., to make the hot-band sheets.

"This is an extremely significant development for the industry and something that everyone in the steel business is watching closely," said the Reverend William T. Hogan, a steel industry histo-rian and professor of economics at Fordham University in New York. "For the large integrated companies, it is a matter of concern because it has the likelihood of making inroads into their territo-

At first, the Nucor plant will be capable of producing just 800,000 tons a year of sheet steel, roughly 2 percent of what the big steel companies manufactured in 1986.

The plant will use scrap steel, from which it is difficult to make the superior-quality sheet produced by the big, integrated steelmakers. The big manufacturers make their steel from basic raw materials: iron ore, coke, and limestone.

While acknowledging that the process would confine the plant, at least initially, to making sheets for such lower-priced, lower-grade products as oil drums, siding and decking, F. Kenneth Iverson, Nucor's chamman, has higher embitions.

Mr. Iverson has his eye on the more lucrative automobile and appliance markets, which use nearly half of the steel produced in the United States. "It will have a big impact," he said of the Tatcho said Wednesday that it had suffered losses of 20 billion yen ($143 million) in bond futures trading. The announcement triggered sharp falls in Japan's yen bond, bond futures, and stock markets.

A spokesman for the Osaka Stock Exchange said that Nikko sold 1.69 million Tateho shares and bought about 257,000 last month. but was unable to say if the deals were on behalf of Nikko or its dients. The exchange has said it is checking for possible insider trading in Tateho shares.

A spokesman for Nikko said that, "We did not engage in insider trading in Tateho shares." He said his company's knowledge of Tate-ho's bond dealings did not infinence its trading of the chemical firm's shares. A different Nikko spokesman said Thursday that the firm had advised Tateho this spring to restrain its buying of bond futures. Nikko shares closed 40 yen up, at 2.340, on the Tokyo Stock Exchange Friday. Tateho shares have not traded since Wednesday, when they closed at 1,520 yen. Their asking price on the Osaka exchange on

De Beers Sets Price Rise

Times Mirror Co. Clears Plan to Block Takeovers

LOS ANGELES — The Times Mirror Co. said its board has approved a plan that would help the Chandler family and other current shareholders retain control of the company. Times Mirror, which publishes The Los Angeles Times, said Thursday it was following the lead of other communications companies that have adopted similar stock plans. It specifically cited The New York Times Co., the Washington Post Co. and Dow Jones & Co. ourses of The Post Co. and Dow Jones & Co., owner of The Wall Street Journal. "We believe that Times Mirror should also have such a capital structure to promote contin-ued independence and integrity of our media operations for the benefit of our shareholders and for the public interests served by our various media operations," said Robert F. Erburu,

Times Mirror's chairman and chief executive officer. Times Mirror also publishes Newsday, The Denver Post, The Baltimore Sun and The Hartford Courant, along with other newspapers and magazines. It also owns cable and broadcast properties. The company said that 41.7 percent of its common stock outstanding is owned by officers, directors and affiliates, including 32.7 percent held by the Chandler family, descendants of the company's founder.

The plan, which must be approved by share holders, would create two new classes of stock with different voting rights and increase the authorized number of common shares.

The company said Thursday that new Class B common shares would carry a one-tenth vote per share, compared with one vote for each share of regular common stock. Times Mirror said the Class B shares would enable it to pay for acquisitions by issuing stock with a minimum of dilution to existing shareholders' voting power. The plan authorizes 100 million Class B

Holders of newly authorized Class C com mon shares would be entitled to 10 votes a share, but the shares would only be transferable among the shareholders' families and other "closely affiliated parties." These shares, however, could be converted to common stock that carries one vote a share. The Class C shares would be distributed to current holders of common stock as a dividend on a one-for-one basis. The plan authorizes 150 million Class C shares. Times Mirror also said it would increase the authorized shares of regular common stock to 300 million, from 80 million. There are 64.6 million common shares outstanding.

Brierley Investments Offers To Buy All of Equity & Law

LONDON - Briefley Investments Ltd. of New Zealand said Friday it is offering 365 pence ($6.05) a share for all ordinary shares outstanding of Equity & Law PLC, valuing the British life insurance company at about £367 million.

IEP Securities Ltd., a member of the BIL group, already owns 29.6 percent of Equity & Law's ordinary shares.

Brierley said it believes it can improve investment performance for policyholders of Equity & Law, which will ultimately be reflected in increased capital values. The acquisition will closely complement Brierley's worldwide activities and would add strength to both com-

Briefley said it does not envisage any change in Equity & Law's management or operational structure should the bid succeed. The company intends to operate Equity & Law as a separate business within the BIL group, while maintaining management continuity.

Equity & Law shares jumped 39 pence to 389 pence following the announcement, well above the price Brierley is offering, which Brierley said represented a premium of 4.3 percent over market value. The premium over the offer indicates investors believe a higher offer might oc made Brierley said the offer was on condition the proposed acquisition was not referred to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission.

Kenner Parker Takes Tonka Offer

BOSTON - Kenner Parker ment. Toys Inc. has agreed to be acquired New World Entertainment Inc.

Under the merger approved by Kenner's board of directors, Tonka will commence a tender offer for Kenner Parker's 11.4 million outstanding common shares, a total of about $581 million, by next Friday.

Kenner's stock was up by $1 a share at $50.875 by the end of trading in New York, while Tonka dropped $1.25 to $20. The tender offer by the Los Angeles-based New World, which is offering $47 a share for the 91.6 percent of Kenner Parker that it does not already own, was blocked by Massachusetts courts while they considered Kenner Parker's suit to halt the hostile bid.

Bruce Berman, a New World spokesman in New York, said the

Allegis Is Tipped to Sell Hertz in Mid-October NEW YORK — Allegis Corp.'s Hertz rental car unit is expected to be sold in mid-October, sources be sold in mid-October, sources close to Allegis said Friday.

However, an Allegis spokesman declined to give a specific timing for selling Hertz, saying only that it would be sold in the fall. Allegis, the parent of United Airlines, has announced a plan to dispose of non-airline assets.

What day is it? - Peter the Great ordered us to count the months from January, the years from the birth of Christ. "It is time to dress - our clothes derive from fashions established by Peter the Great, made in factories which he devised, from wool shorn from the sheep which he introduced into Russia. "Our newspapers are brought in — Peter the Great established them, and the script superseding the Old Slavonic was designed by him: he cut out

"You must go to law? — its form was prescribed by Peter the Great: it will be acted upon according

The Russian state when Peter I assumed the crown was a pitiful object. Land-locked but for the arctic port of Arkhangelsk - ice-free only three or four months of the year - and bordered by a cordon of hostile powers, Sweden, Livonia, Poland, and the Ottoman Empire, all of whom were deter-mined to keep it isolated and exploitable, Russia was effectively denied commerce both material and intellectual with the rest of Europe. The Renais-sance, with the scientific and technical advances which stemmed from it, had passed it by: Culturally it was no more than a decayed relic of past medieval splendor. Its political institutions were still weakened by two and a half centuries of Tatar satrapy: Political control was effected by fire, ax and the torture chamber, and was exercised by the boyars who grouped themselves about the person of which-the psychology of effective tyranny, had best stay with Robert K. Massie's "Peter the Great" (1980).

Glen Petrie, the author of "The Fourth King," a novel about Pushkin, wrote this review for The Wash-

Sea. Russian armies were massed along the banks of the Pruth and the Dniester, the Baltic coastline from Vyborg in Finland to Riga in Latvia was firmly and ir evocably under Russian control, while Russian fleets roamed the Baltic and Gulf of Bothnia at will. The military might of Sweden's Charles XII and his Livonian allies lay broken by Russian arms, the Kindom of Poland was in terminal decline and the Ottoman Empire was in retreat.

Russian opinion regarding Peter I's achievements has been divided - and not only along "European" or Slavophile lines. To the scientist-poet Lomonosov ("He was your God, he is your God, O Russia!"), as to most historians of the Stalin era, he was a genius without failings. The father of Russian historians, Pushkin's friend and mentor, N.M. Karamzin, was not so sure. In 1817, he wrote of the new "intelligentsia": "We have become citizens of the world, but in some respects we have ceased to be Russian citizens. That is the legacy of Peter I."

Troyat's biography is a strangely old-fashioned work. Enormously readable, it has an irresistible story to tell — that of incredible success against seemingly hopeless odds. But as a contribution to Russian studies, it is simply a non-event. Dmitry Blagoy, doyen of Soviet Pushkin studies, once remarked of Troyat's "Pushkin" that it read like a 19th-century French sentimental novel. "Peter the Great" reads like a 19-century English historical novel. Anyone seeking a readable account in English that also provides insight into the emergence of the Russian state as a world power, or the institution of a social structure which contained within it tion of a social structure which contained within it the seeds of the downfall of czarist rule, or even into

Terrell Is Still a Tiger At Home, Defeating Indians on 6-Hitter

COOK

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches DETROIT - Walt Terrell, supported by bases-empty home runs from Lou Whitaker and Kirk Gibson, pitched a six-hitter Thursday night as the Detroit Tigers beat the Cleveland Indians, 3-1

The Tigers' 21st triumph in their last 29 games upped their first-place lead over the idle Toronto Blue Jays to 11/2 games in the American League's East Division.

Terrell raised his record at Tiger Stadium this year to 1-2, with a 2.30 carned-run average, while on the road the right-hander is 1-8 with a 6.48 ERA. In his three seasons with the Tigers, he is 30-7 at home.

"He's able to keep the ball away from left-handed hitters," said the Indians' manager, Doc Edwards. "You hit a lot of balls to center field, where they've got Chet Lemon. You've got to hit it out of the park in center field to get it over Lemon's head here, and that's 440 feet away. Everything else, Lemon catches."

But the Tigers' manager, Sparky Anderson, said that Terrell had been successful by getting batters to hit ground outs.

"That's 13 outs that never left the infield," Anderson said. "How many pop ups did he get? (Four.) And how many strikeouts? (Four.). So that's 21 outs the ball never left to the infield. If only six balls get out of your infield, you've got a heckura chance to win a game." Said Terrell: "Twe pitched some very good games on the road and got no-decisions." He was "fired," he said, "of hearing I pitched terrible on the road."

He lost his shutout in the eighth inning when, with one out, Andy Allanson and Brett Butler singled, pinch-hitter Brook Jacoby walked to load the bases and Julio Franco's sacrifice fly scored Allanson. Rich Yett of the Indians gave up both home runs on 3-2 pitches as the Tigers scored three times in the third. Whitaker led off the inning with his homer and Gib-son belted his one out later. Then Alan Trammell, who MOTHERS went four for-four, doubled and scored on Darrell Evans's hard single to right.

Twins 2, Red Sox 1: In Minneapolis, Al Newman drew a third straight walk off Boston's Wes Gardner with one out in the bottom of the 10th, forcing in Gene arkin with the winning run. The game was scoreless until the ninth, when Ed

Romero put Boston ahead with a sacrifice fly and Kirby Puckett homered with two out in the bottom of ing. Larkin doubled with one out in the 10th, then Randy Bush was intentionally walked and pinch-hitter Roy Smalley also walked, to load the bases. Brewers 8, Royals 2: In Kansas City, Missouri, Greg Brock went four for five with three run-scoring singles and scored three times to help Milwankee sweep the three-game series. Chris Bosio, who pitched a two-hitter ast the Twins in his last start, held the Royals to against the 1 wins in his last start, held the Royals to four bits while striking out seven in seven innings, and Mark Gubicza lost his axuh straight start.

White Sox 5, Rangers 2: In Chicago, Floyd Barmis-ter, although allowing Texas eight hits in 7% innings, struck out a season-high nine.

Actros' Hatcher Suspended for 10 Days The Houston Astros' Billy Hatcher was suspended Thursday for 10 days for using a corked bat as the LY, I DION T DELVE THIS National League president, Bart Giamatti, continued a I WALKED FROM AN HOUSE crackdown against scuffed baseballs and tampered bats, APPRECIATE YEARS INVINCENT The Associated Press reported from Houston.

The Astros' manager, Hal Lanier, was fined an undis-closed amount because Giamatti held that a manager is responsible for illegal bats used by his players.

Hatcher was ejected from Tuesday's game against the Chicago Cubs after his bat splintered, revealing it Dank had been injected with cork.

"I do want to state for the record I did not know the bat was loaded," Histoher said. "I used it, it happened, and I will take the punishment if that's what is best. "I've probably broken 50 bats this season. How many of them were corked? I've probably given away 25 bats to teammates this year. If the bats were corked would I be giving them away?"

"I knew there probably would be a 10-day suspension for Billy, but I don't agree with the fine," be said.
"I don't think it's a manager's job to check the inventory of the bats."

In Some Leagues, a Half-Baked Idea Can Get A Player Scalloped.

By Ira Berkow

New York Times Service NEW YORK - In a minor league baseball game in Williamsport, Pennsylvania, the other night, the catcher threw wildly into left field in what appeared to be an attempt to pick a runner off third base. When the runner reached home he was surprised, as was the umpire, that the catcher still had the ball and tagged him out.

The runner and the umpire were surprised for good reason. They thought that the thing thrown by the catcher, and still being retrieved by the outfield. ers, was the ball in the game. It turned out to be only the potato in the game. A white potato, as it were, which had been peeled by the catcher, Dave Bresnahan of the Williamsport Bills, a Cleveland Indians team in the Class AA Eastern League. It was a costly play. It cost Bresnahan's team a run, cost him a $50 fine, and cost him his job. The Indians' director of player development, Jeff Scott, released him right afterward.

I had checked the rule book a few days ago and found nothing in it that says you can't throw a potato in a game," Bresnahan said Wednesday by phone from Williamsport. Which is true. The rule book also has no ruling against throwing a watermelon in a game. But that's another issue.

Before the pitch, Bresnahan had told the umpire that he had a problem with a string on his glove, and went back to the bench to get a new glove. In that glove was the now notorious white potato. Back behind the plate, potato in glove, Bresnahan gave the pitcher the signal, then, just before the ball was thrown, Bresnahan defuly switched and threw the potato intentionally wild over third.

"When I tagged the runner," he said, "the umpire looked stunned. He realized that the potato was in the outlield, and now called 'time out.'

"I really thought they'd say, 'Do it over,' like a net ball in tennis, and get a laugh out of it. But the umpire didn't have any sense of humor about it at all. Maybe in a week he might. I think he thought I was trying to show him up, but I wasn't.
"I was just trying to put some fun into the game. I mean, it's not like it was the seventh game of the World Series. We're in seventh place, 26 sames out of first. It was the 137th game of a 140-game season. The ump said, 'You can't do that!'

"I said, 'Why not? Where's the rule against it?" "He said, 'You just can't, that's all.' I guess he

"What I did was just to liven up a dull end of a eason," Bresnahan said. The opposing team, "the Phillies, they thought it was funny. My teammates thought it was funny — and had encouraged me to do it. The fans and management thought it was funny. You know they're having a Potato Night at the ball park. Come to the park with a potato and you get in for a buck. I think tickets are $2.50 or $3 otherwise.

"Everybody thought it was funny except the umpire, and the Cleveland management."

The "prank or practical joke," admitted the Indians' Scott, "was kinda funny, but I think the game, once you get on the field, is sacred. You can't tamper with the integrity of the game. It disrupted the flow of the game, and I can't accept that."

SPORTS BRIEFS

NFL, Union Talks Stall on Player Reps

NEW YORK (AP) - The National Football League's labor talks, of which unrestricted free agency is expected to be the stickiest issue, stalled Thursday because of an impasse over protection for player representatives. But both sides agreed they would continue to work to avoid the second player strike in the last five years.

The player-rep protection issue moved to the forefront Tuesday, when Brian Holloway of the New England Patriots, a three-time Pro Bowl offensive tackle who, as a vice president, had represented the union on national relevision Monday night, was told by his coach, Raymond Berry, to either retire or be traded. He was traded to the Los Angeles Raiders a few hours later for a fifth-round draft choice.

The contract between the union and the league expired Monday, but the union cannot strike until Sept. 15 because it did not give its 60-day strike notice to the league and the National Labor Relations Board until July 15. The day the contract expired, the union's executive committee set a strike date, reported to be either the second or fourth week of the regular season, which begins Sept. 13. The strike date will be voted on next Tuesday by the player representatives for the 28 teams.

Sindelar's 65 Leads B.C. Open Golf

ENDICOTT, New York (AP) — Hometown favorite Joey Sindelar played the final 10 holes in seven under par Thursday and finished with a 6-under-par 65 to hold a one-stroke lead after one round of the B.C. Open Jay Delsing was second at 66, with Antonio Cerda third, another stroke back. Delsing set the En-Joie Golf Club course of 62 in 1985, but finished seventh that year as Sindelar won. "I was lucky at the right times today," Sindelar said. "I hit three bad drives and all three were on par-5 holes, which allowed me to make up for the mistakes. Rather than looking at bogeys, it just meant missed chances for birdies. It wasn't a pretty round of golf."

The NFL's controversial supplemental draft of Cris Carter and Charles Gladman, postponed for a week to give the athletes a chance to regain their college eligibility, is to be held Friday. No appeal was made in either Petr Praisler, 21, a Czechoslovakian defenseman who was picked by the Los Angeles Kings in the 1985 draft, has defected and will play for the National Hockey League team, it was announced Thursday. Prajsler had been staying in Austria with his wife but has flown to Los Angeles. (AP) The Welsh Rugby Union said Friday that it would send a team to New Zealand next year for an eight-match tour, and that, five years after the Falklands war, it had decided to resume playing teams from Argentina.

Nystrom Upset by Krishnan in Open; Shriver Easily Advances to 3d Round

NEW YORK — Joakim Nys-trom of Sweden, seeded 10th in the men's draw of the U.S. Open tennis tournament, was upset Friday afternoon by unseeded Ramesh Krishnan of India, 6-4, 7-5, 6-2.

Pam Shriver of the United States, seeded fifth in the women's draw, used her overpowering serveand-volley game to advance to the third round as she needed only 54 minutes to defeat qualifier Iwona Kuczynska of Poland, 6-3, 6-2.

Shriver never lost her serve — Kuczynska failed to win more than two points in any of Shriver's nine service games — and in 33 ap-proaches to net Shriver never made a volleying error. She said that Kuczynska, ranked

No. 127 in the world, "has got tal-ent, but she's a little raw." Shriver has lost only two matches in five months, one to Martina Navratilova and one to Steffi Graf. In Thursday night's matches, all the seeded men and women who played all advanced to the third round, almost all with ease. But the eighth-seeded John McEnroe, who always seems to have trouble with night matches in the U.S. Open --more with officials and fans than with opponents - fought almost everyone in sight before taking a 7-6 (7-3), 2-6, 6-4, 6-2 victory over fellow American Richey Reneberg.

Perhaps the happiest of the group was Boris Becker, the No. 4 seed from West Germany, who after coming from two sets down in the first round to beat Tim Wilkison, defeated Jonathan Canter of the United States, 6-4, 6-2, 7-6 (7-3).

But he couldn't be happy with his serve. During the match he stopped serving in mid-motion sev-

Michael Chang, a 15-year-old Californian whose first-round victory made him the youngest male to win a U.S. Open match in nearly 70 years, was eliminated by Nduka Odizor of Nigeria, 6-1, 6-2, 6-7 (9-6), McEnroe, playing under an al-most full moon, had his hands full with Reneberg, a recent graduate of Southern Methodist University who gave Lendl a tough time in a third-round match at Wimbledon. Reneberg broke McEnroe in the

UBEC, Maine - To the people of this remote village on the easternmost tip of the United States, the lighthouse at West Quoddy Head means two things: It is a romantic symbol of a storied past dependent on the sea and it is hope for a future built on tourism.

About 65,000 visitors each year come to the candy-striped lighthouse to look out at the Atlantic New Brunswick, Canada. But residents here fear for the lighthouse and their economy because the U.S. Coast Guard is planning to begin automating the lighthouse in

This means that within 10 months the lightkeeper and his family will be transferred, and the lighthouse may be left vacant and, some citizens fear, become a target for vandals.

Lubec residents have begun a drive against the Coast Guard's plans, enlisting the support of the state's congressional delegation and securing about 600 names so far on petitions.

The town is one of a few to fight lighthouse automation. Over the last two decades, the Coast Guard has automated hundreds of its 450 lighthouses, said Chief Petty Officer Ken Arbogast of the Coast Guard's First District in Boston. The 16 lighthouses still manned will be automated by 1990, he said. Ken Black, a retired Coast Guard officer and the director of a lighthouse museum in Rockland.

Maine, believes it has been about a decade since a group successfully fought the automation of a light-Most towns quickly find new uses for the keeper's house and other buildings around lighthouses.

Arbogast said. But Lubec civic leaders say the town's $900,000 annual budget is already strained by city services and the closing of its landfill and cannot afford another burden. "The police department can't afford to go out there all the time. and we can't afford to heat it." said Town Manager Ed Collins.

LUBEC was once a prosperous town built on sardine canning and can making. But the can company closed 15 years ago, and the sardine canners now operate seasonally. Unemployment is 18 percent. And the population has dropped from

Lubec has tried to base a revival on tourism, with the draw being the lighthouse and the Campobello Island summer home of Franklin D. Narrows, said Maurice Babcock, chairman of the town's planning board and leader of the petition

"Lubec needs everything it can get," said Babcock, whose father was a lightkeeper at Boston Light, the United States's first lighthouse. "I would hate to see the lighthouse vandalized and put out of commission. It could become an eyesore. Situated at the end of a sparsely developed road, the lighthouse is about a mile from its closest neighbor. It has been the site of numerous incidents of vandalism and mischief, even with a lightkeeper in residence. "We have the same oblems here as in other places," said the lightkeeper. Mac Rouse. "A few of the young people have a few beers and then they start vandalizing things."

The residents estimate that moving the lightkeeper out of the lighthouse would mean a reduction of $50,000 in salaries and services in the town.

People also like thinking about the romance of a gray-bearded lightkeeper climbing the lighthouse stairs to light a beacon for lonely sailors. They like remembering the days when lightkeepers rowed boats out to sailors in trouble. Those days are past, said Arbogast.

Current technology - photoelectric cells to turn the light off and on, and radio sensors to sense for - makes the expense of a lightkeeper unjustifiable, he said.

Arbogast said it is unlikely that Lubec residents will have much effect on the Coast Guard's plans. Several organizations have expressed preliminary interest in using the keeper's house, including the Maine Department of Parks and Recreation, the Maine Marine Resources Department and the New England Aquarium, Arbogast

Parks and Recreation would like to house the manager of the adja-cent Quoddy Head State Park. which is open from May 30 to Oct.

Babcock said he has heard of the interest of the agencies, but none have guaranteed there would be a permanent resident in the house.

bassador and other American diplomats with insights into the mysteries of China not available otherwise.

Scores of relatives also help keep her in touch with Chinese reality. When she arranged a recent family reunion, 60 members of her Chinese family - including some great-great-aunus showed up at the embassy.

Lord, 49, had originally planned to work on her fourth novel during her diplomatic stay, but official commitments and her involvement in local arts affairs have forced her to postpone that

Lately, the most enjoyable part of her day is after the routine round of protocol is over. She's been staying up until 2 or 3 A.M., working with Chinese friends on her latest project to bring a little spontaneity to one of the world's most somber capitals — a Chinese version of the Broadway revue "Ain't Misbehavin'." She sees in the show — a 24-song presentation of the music of the Harlem jazz great Fats Waller - a chance to break down the But her relationship with the artistic walls of conventional Chi-Chinese is a two-way street. If she nese theater and to open Chinese gives them a glimpse of life as minds to what she calls the "dra-

some American officials and their wives have complained privately that during her two years at the embassy here Lord sometimes has acted as though she, and not her husband, were the ambassador, and that she gets her way all Still, the prevailing view ap-pears to be that, if her high-profile style offends a few people, the result is worth it. As a member of a visiting congressional staff delegation put it recently, "A lot of Chinese think they can fool the Americans. . . . But they can't

"I don't know how they can think when they're living sometimes four to a room, but they do. Some writers can only work after everyone else - wife, mother, father, child - goes to bed." Lord blames China's long isolation from much foreign literature and domestic restrictions placed on writers for the country's failure to produce a contemporary world-class writer. "The Chinese are so proud of their Olympic gold medals." she said. But where are the gold medals for writing, or for painting?" Earlier this year, the Commu nist Party launched a propaganda offensive against Western democratic ideas and influences and tightened its controls over publishing, putting an end to a relatively open atmosphere of debate. Since then, at least seven intellectuals have been ousted from the party and several journals have been shut down. It has not been a good year for the friends of Bette Lord. Some intellectuals have been intimidated and are lying low; some have put their best work on hold, or stashed it in drawers waiting for a brighter day.

For writers in this society who test the outer limits, the chilling effect is deep," Lord said. "It pains me to think of the untapped talent, the books that haven't been written, the paintings that haven't been painted the manuscripts stored away, the loss of momentum.

A few writers are able to speak mockingly of their predicament. Lord said she has heard more than one lament, with a characteristically Chinese shrug: "I have the freedom to write whatthere is a huge gap between her ever I want. What I don't have is
